

Blessed Are the Merciful

The Eight Beatitudes · The Beatitudes

Mercy extends compassionate help to the miserable, forgiving those who offend, assisting those in need, and showing kindness to the undeserving. The merciful reflect God's own character, for He delights in mercy. This beatitude does not teach that mercy earns mercy—such would contradict grace. Rather, those who have received God's mercy naturally extend it to others, and those who refuse mercy to others demonstrate they have never truly received it themselves. Mercy given becomes mercy received in the divine economy.
