

Blessed Are the Poor in Spirit

The Eight Beatitudes · The Beatitudes

The first beatitude establishes the foundation of all spiritual blessing—poverty of spirit. This describes not material poverty but spiritual bankruptcy before God, the humble recognition that we possess nothing of merit and depend entirely upon divine grace. The poor in spirit have abandoned all self-righteousness and self-sufficiency, acknowledging their desperate need for God. This poverty opposes the Pharisaic pride that trusts in its own righteousness. Those who recognize their spiritual destitution receive the kingdom of heaven—not as reward for humility but because empty hands alone can receive God's gift.
