

Blessed Are They Which Do Hunger and Thirst After Righteousness

The Eight Beatitudes · The Beatitudes

This beatitude blesses those who intensely desire righteousness—both the imputed righteousness of justification and the practical righteousness of sanctification. The imagery of hunger and thirst conveys desperate longing, not casual preference. As starving people crave food and parched throats crave water, so the blessed intensely desire to be right with God and to live rightly before Him. Such seekers will be filled—satisfied with the righteousness of Christ and progressively transformed into His likeness.
