

1 Chronicles 16:34

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

O give thanks unto the LORD; for he is good; for his mercy endureth for ever.

Analysis

The refrain 'O give thanks unto the LORD; for he is good; for his mercy endureth for ever' appears throughout Scripture (Psalms 106, 107, 118, 136). Thanksgiving (yadah - praise/confess) responds to God's character ('he is good') and His covenant love (chesed - steadfast love/mercy). The phrase 'endureth forever' (l'olam chasdo) emphasizes the permanence of God's covenant commitment. This isn't based on Israel's worthiness but God's nature. The repetition of this refrain in temple worship (1 Chronicles 16:41, 2 Chronicles 5:13, 7:3, 6, 20:21) made it central to Israel's liturgical life, pointing to the eternal nature of God's love demonstrated ultimately in Christ.

Historical Context

This antiphonal response (one group singing 'for he is good,' another responding 'for his mercy endures forever') characterized temple worship. Its frequent repetition in Chronicles emphasizes the Chronicler's focus on proper worship as covenant community's heartbeat.
