

1 Chronicles 29:15

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For we are strangers before thee, and sojourners, as were all our fathers: our days on the earth are as a shadow, and there is none abiding.

Analysis

David's humble confession: 'For we are strangers before thee, and sojourners, as were all our fathers: our days on the earth are as a shadow, and there is none abiding.' This echoes Abraham's self-description (Genesis 23:4) and anticipates Hebrews 11:13-16. The terms 'strangers' (gerim) and 'sojourners' (toshavim) describe temporary residents without permanent inheritance. Life's brevity - 'as a shadow' - emphasizes the transient nature of earthly existence. 'None abiding' (ein miqveh) means no enduring hope apart from God. This perspective relativizes earthly achievements (even temple building) and points to the eternal inheritance in Christ. It teaches living as aliens and exiles who long for heavenly country.

Historical Context

Spoken during temple dedication preparations (c. 971 BCE), this confession demonstrates mature wisdom - even while accomplishing Israel's greatest project, David recognized life's brevity and dependence on God's eternal purposes beyond earthly achievements.
