

1 Corinthians 1:22

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For the Jews require a sign, and the Greeks seek after wisdom:

Analysis

For the Jews require a sign, and the Greeks seek after wisdom (epeidē Ioudaioi sēmeion aitousin kai Hellēnes sophian zētousin, ἐπειδὴ Ἰουδαῖοι σημεῖον αἰτοῦσιν καὶ Ἕλληνες σοφίαν ζητοῦσιν)—Paul identifies two human demands that the cross refuses to satisfy. Jews require a sign (sēmeion aitousin, σημεῖον αἰτοῦσιν)—miraculous, supernatural validation of messianic claims. Despite Jesus' many miracles, the religious leaders demanded still more signs (Matt 12:38, John 6:30). They expected a conquering Messiah who would defeat Rome, not a crucified criminal.

Greeks seek after wisdom (sophian zētousin, σοφίαν ζητοῦσιν)—philosophical sophistication, rational explanations, intellectual coherence. Greek culture prized dialectic, rhetoric, and speculative thought. The idea of salvation through a crucified Jew seemed primitive and absurd, lacking the intellectual elegance Greeks admired. Both Jews and Greeks approached God with demands and prerequisites. The cross satisfies neither—yet saves both (v. 24).

Historical Context

Jewish messianic expectations centered on prophetic signs fulfilling Daniel 7 and other texts—a glorious Son of Man coming in power. The crucifixion seemed to disqualify Jesus as Messiah. Greek intellectuals, meanwhile, viewed Christianity as a crude superstition beneath philosophical consideration. Paul declares that God deliberately chose a method—the cross—that offends both Jewish and Greek sensibilities, refusing to play by human rules.

Study Questions

1. How do modern people similarly demand "signs" (proof, evidence, experience) or "wisdom" (intellectual sophistication, rational coherence) before believing?
2. Why does God refuse to satisfy these human prerequisites for faith?
3. In what ways do we approach God with our own demands and conditions rather than receiving the gospel on His terms?
