

1 Corinthians 11:10

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For this cause ought the woman to have power on her head because of the angels.

Analysis

For this cause ought the woman to have power on her head because of the angels—One of Scripture's most enigmatic verses. Ἐξουσίαν ἔχειν ἐπὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς (to have authority on the head) likely means the symbol of authority (the covering itself), not autonomous power. The head covering represents a woman's acceptance of her place in the created order—her exousia (authority/right) to participate in worship while honoring God's design.

Because of the angels (διὰ τοὺς ἀγγέλους)—interpreters propose:

1. angels as guardians of worship order (cf. Isaiah 6, Revelation 4-5), who observe human worship and are offended by disorder
2. fallen angels who sinned by crossing boundaries (Genesis 6:1-4, 2 Peter 2:4, Jude 6), making proper boundaries essential
3. angels as messengers/ministers whom women must not tempt or distract.

Most likely, angels as witnesses to worship (Ephesians 3:10, 1 Timothy 5:21) require proper order that reflects heavenly realities. The covering signals submission to cosmic order, not merely social convention.

Historical Context

Jewish tradition held that angels were present during worship and Scripture reading (Hebrews 12:22). Qumran texts (Dead Sea Scrolls) excluded physically disabled men from worship 'because holy angels are in their congregation' (1QSa

2:8-9). Paul assumes angelic presence during Christian worship and argues that gender confusion in worship offends not just human sensibilities but cosmic order observed by heavenly beings. This elevates the head-covering issue from cultural trivia to theological significance.
