

1 Corinthians 14:23

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

If therefore the whole church be come together into one place, and all speak with tongues, and there come in those that are unlearned, or unbelievers, will they not say that ye are mad?

Analysis

---

If therefore the whole church be come together into one place, and all speak with tongues—Paul imagines a corporate gathering where pantes glōssais lalōsin (πάντες γλώσσαις λαλῶσιν, "all speak in tongues"). And there come in those that are unlearned, or unbelievers—idiōtai (ἰδιῶται, "uninitiated, outsiders") or apistoi (ἀπιστοι, "unbelievers") enter. Will they not say that ye are mad? The rhetorical question expects "Yes"—maineste (μαίνεσθε, "you are insane, raving").

This is devastating to the Corinthians' view: far from being a positive sign (v. 22), uninterpreted tongues make Christianity look like insanity to outsiders. The word mainomai describes ecstatic religious mania (Acts 26:24, Festus tells Paul "you are mad"). Pagan mystery religions featured ecstatic glossolalia; to outsiders, Christian tongues without interpretation looked identical—religious frenzy, not divine revelation.

Historical Context

Corinthian worship apparently featured simultaneous, uninterpreted tongues-speaking. To outsiders familiar with pagan ecstatic cults, this would confirm suspicions that Christianity was another irrational mystery religion.

Study Questions

1. How would a visitor perceive a worship service dominated by uninterpreted tongues?
2. Why is the charge of insanity ('ye are mad') particularly damaging to Christian witness?
3. What modern worship practices might similarly confuse or repel outsiders?
