

1 Corinthians 16:20

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

All the brethren greet you. Greet ye one another with an holy kiss.

Analysis

All the brethren greet you—This corporate greeting, broader than the Asian churches (v. 19), likely includes Paul's ministry team in Ephesus and perhaps converts from across his mission field. The repetition of greetings emphasizes relational connectivity across the early Christian network.

Greet ye one another with an holy kiss—Philēma hagion (φίλημα ἅγιον, "holy kiss") appears five times in the New Testament (Romans 16:16, 1 Corinthians 16:20, 2 Corinthians 13:12, 1 Thessalonians 5:26, 1 Peter 5:14). The kiss was a standard Mediterranean greeting between family and friends; Paul sanctifies it as hagion (ἅγιον, "holy"), set apart for Christian fellowship. This physical expression of unity and affection countered Corinthian factionalism. The church is family, not merely an organization, and physical affection expresses spiritual reality.

Historical Context

The kiss greeting, common in Mediterranean culture, was adopted by Christians as a liturgical practice in worship services. Early church fathers (Justin Martyr, Tertullian, Clement of Alexandria) describe the holy kiss as part of Christian worship. By the medieval period it evolved into the "kiss of peace" still practiced in some liturgical traditions. The kiss demonstrated reconciliation and equality, shocking in a stratified society.
