

1 Corinthians 16:23

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you.

Analysis

The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you—Hē charis tou kyriou Iēsou (ἡ χάρις τοῦ κυρίου Ἰησοῦ). Paul's typical closing benediction invokes charis (χάρις, "grace")—God's unmerited favor, the foundation of all Christian existence. After correcting Corinthian pride, factionalism, immorality, and doctrinal error, Paul ends with grace, not condemnation. The letter that exposed sin and demanded repentance concludes by pointing to God's gracious provision in Christ.

Every Pauline letter begins and ends with grace (Romans 1:7, 16:20; 1 Corinthians 1:3, 16:23; 2 Corinthians 1:2, 13:14; etc.). This inclusio frames all theology and ethics within grace. Correcting Corinthian errors wasn't legalistic moralism but calling them back to grace-empowered transformation. The grace of Jesus Christ, not human effort, produces holy living, spiritual maturity, and church unity.

Historical Context

Ancient letters typically ended with "farewell" (errōso). Paul Christianizes the epistolary form, replacing conventional farewell with theological benediction. This benediction became standard in Christian worship liturgy. The consistent grace-emphasis distinguishes Christianity from works-based religion: transformation comes through grace, not human achievement. Even corrective letters drip with grace.

Study Questions

1. Why does Paul end a heavily corrective letter with a grace benediction rather than a warning or threat?
2. How does framing everything—theology, ethics, correction—within grace change Christianity's character?
3. What's the relationship between Paul's corrections (chapters 1-15) and his final grace benediction?
