

1 Corinthians 4:15

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For though ye have ten thousand instructors in Christ, yet have ye not many fathers: for in Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel.

Analysis

For though ye have ten thousand instructors in Christ, yet have ye not many fathers. Myrioi paidagōgoi (μυρίοι παιδαγωγοί, "ten thousand guardians/tutors") uses hyperbole. Paidagōgos referred to the household slave who supervised children, escorted them to school, and enforced discipline—a custodian, not primarily a teacher (Gal 3:24-25). Paul contrasts numerous such functionaries with pateras (πατέρας, "fathers")—one has many tutors but few fathers.

For in Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel. The aorist egennēsa (ἐγέννησα, "I begat/fathered") describes Paul's evangelistic ministry that birthed the Corinthian church (Acts 18:1-11). Dia tou euangeliou (διὰ τοῦ εὐαγγελίου, "through the gospel") identifies the means—spiritual paternity occurs through gospel proclamation. This unique relationship grounds Paul's authority: he's not merely a teacher among many but their founding apostle. While others build on his foundation (3:10), none can claim the same generative role.

Historical Context

In Corinth's philosophical marketplace, itinerant teachers competed for students. The Corinthians treated Christian leaders like rival philosophers, forgetting that Paul uniquely brought them the gospel that saved them. His paternal claim isn't arrogant but factual—he planted the church (3:6). This father-child metaphor appears elsewhere (1 Thess 2:11; Phlm 10; 1 Tim 1:2; Titus 1:4) for those Paul evangelized or mentored.

Study Questions

1. Who served as your spiritual father or mother—the person who first brought you the gospel or discipled you in early faith?
2. How do you honor those who spiritually 'begot' you, versus more recent teachers who have instructed your established faith?
3. Are you actively seeking to 'beget' spiritual children through evangelism and discipleship, or merely consuming teaching from others?
