

1 Corinthians 7:27

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Art thou bound unto a wife? seek not to be loosed. Art thou loosed from a wife? seek not a wife.

Analysis

Art thou bound unto a wife? seek not to be loosed—the verb dedesai (δέδεσαι, "are you bound") uses marriage-bond language (v. 39; Romans 7:2). Paul's command mē zētei lysin (μὴ ζητεῖ λύσιν, "do not seek release") forbids pursuing divorce. Despite singleness's advantages (vv. 26, 32-35), married believers must not seek to end marriages for spiritual reasons.

Conversely, Art thou loosed from a wife? seek not a wife. The term lleysai (λέλυσαι, "are you freed") describes single status—never married, widowed, or legitimately divorced. Paul advises singles not to pursue marriage given present circumstances, though he will clarify marriage is not sinful (v. 28). This is prudential counsel, not prohibition.

Paul's balanced instruction protects marriage's permanence while acknowledging singleness's advantages. Married believers should not divorce; single believers need not rush into marriage. This counters both ascetic pressure to abandon marriages and cultural pressure for universal marriage. Each calling has validity; believers should be content where God has placed them.

Historical Context

Greco-Roman culture strongly emphasized marriage and procreation as civic duties. Paul's counsel that singles need not marry was countercultural. Conversely, his prohibition against married believers seeking divorce for ascetic reasons protected marriages from Corinthian dualism.
