

1 Corinthians 8:12

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But when ye sin so against the brethren, and wound their weak conscience, ye sin against Christ.

Analysis

But when ye sin so against the brethren, and wound their weak conscience (τύπτοντες αὐτῶν τὴν συνείδησιν ἀσθενοῦσαν, typtontes auton ten syneidesin astheousan, "striking their weak conscience")—the verb typto (τύπτω, "strike, beat, wound") is violent. Flaunting liberty doesn't merely disappoint but brutalizes the weak believer's conscience. The participle structure shows the sin's dual nature: sinning against brethren by wounding their conscience.

Ye sin against Christ (εἰς Χριστὸν ἁμαρτάνετε, eis Christon hamartanete)—Paul's climax. Wounding a believer is wounding Christ Himself (Acts 9:4, "why persecutest thou me?"). Christ so identifies with His people that offending them offends Him. This elevates "disputable matters" to ultimate significance: how you treat the weak brother in matters of Christian liberty reveals how you treat Christ. Knowledge divorced from love isn't mere immaturity—it's sin against Christ.

Historical Context

This teaching echoes Jesus's parable of the sheep and goats (Matthew 25:40, "inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me"). Paul applies Christ's mystical union with believers practically: despising the weak, asserting rights at their expense, or wounding their conscience is direct assault on Christ. This makes love for fellow believers non-negotiable.

Study Questions

1. How does realizing that wounding a believer wounds Christ change your approach to disputable matters?
2. Where have you sinned against Christ by sinning against fellow believers through selfish exercise of liberty?
3. What would it look like to treat weaker believers with the same care you'd show Christ Himself?
