

1 Peter 2:10

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Which in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God: which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy.

Analysis

Peter applies Hosea's prophecy to church. "Which in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God" (hoi pote ou laos, nyn de laos theou) quotes Hosea 2:23. Gentiles, formerly excluded from covenant, now constitute God's people through Christ. "Which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy" (hoi ouk ēlēmenoi, nyn de eleēthentes) emphasizes transformation from judgment to grace. This radical shift demonstrates gospel power—transforming outsiders into insiders, strangers into family, enemies into beloved.

Historical Context

Hosea prophesied Israel's restoration after judgment. Peter applies this to Gentile inclusion in covenant community—stunning claim that offended Jewish exclusivists. The church, predominantly Gentile by time of writing, fulfilled promises made to Israel. This doesn't mean replacement but expansion—one people of God comprising believing Jews and Gentiles (Galatians 3:28-29, Ephesians 2:11-22). Early church struggled with Jew-Gentile unity; Peter's teaching promoted reconciliation in Christ.
