

1 Peter 2:15

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For so is the will of God, that with well doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men:

Analysis

Peter reveals God's will for Christian conduct: "For so is the will of God, that with well doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men" (hoti houtōs estin to thelēma tou theou, agathopoiountas phimoun tēn tōn aponōn anthrōpōn agnosia). Good works are God's ordained means to silence false accusations. "Foolish men" (aponōn anthrōpōn) refers to those lacking spiritual understanding who slander Christians. The verb "put to silence" (phimoun) literally means "muzzle"—good conduct silences critics like a muzzle silences an animal.

Historical Context

Christians faced slanderous accusations (atheism, immorality, disloyalty). Peter's strategy: let conduct disprove lies. This apologetic approach—defending faith through lifestyle, not just arguments—proved effective. Pliny the Younger (Roman governor, c. AD 112) investigated Christians and found them morally exemplary despite accusations. Early church's charity, sexual purity, and integrity attracted converts and eventually won legal toleration.
