

1 Samuel 11:13

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And Saul said, There shall not a man be put to death this day:
for to day the LORD hath wrought salvation in Israel.

Analysis

And Saul said, There shall not a man be put to death this day: for to day the LORD hath wrought salvation in Israel.

Saul's refusal to execute his critics represents his finest moment, demonstrating kingly restraint and theological insight. His reasoning - 'to day the LORD hath wrought salvation in Israel' - correctly attributes victory to God rather than himself. The phrase 'there shall not a man be put to death this day' establishes a precedent of royal mercy that reflects divine grace. Saul recognizes that celebration of God's deliverance should not be marred by internal bloodshed. This grace toward enemies would, ironically, later contribute to his downfall when he spared Agag.

Historical Context

Ancient Near Eastern victory celebrations often included execution of enemies and traitors. Saul's restraint contrasts sharply with standard practice and demonstrates the influence of Yahwistic theology on early Israelite kingship. This moment of grace anticipates David's later refusal to harm Saul despite opportunity.
