

1 Samuel 11:6

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And the Spirit of God came upon Saul when he heard those tidings, and his anger was kindled greatly.

Analysis

And the Spirit of God came upon Saul when he heard those tidings, and his anger was kindled greatly.

The Spirit of God (ruach Elohim) coming upon Saul echoes the empowerment of the judges (Judges 3:10; 6:34; 11:29). The phrase 'came upon' (tsalach) implies rushing or falling upon with overwhelming force. Notably, his anger 'was kindled greatly' - righteous indignation that mirrors God's own jealousy for His people's honor. This Spirit-empowered anger transforms the hesitant Saul of chapter 10 into a decisive military leader. The conjunction of divine Spirit and holy anger demonstrates that godly leadership requires both supernatural enablement and passionate commitment to justice.

Historical Context

The charismatic empowerment of leaders by God's Spirit was the primary form of divine guidance during the judges period. This 'rushing' of the Spirit provided temporary enablement for specific tasks, distinct from the permanent indwelling that New Testament believers experience.
