

1 Samuel 20:39

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But the lad knew not any thing: only Jonathan and David knew the matter.

Analysis

But the lad knew not any thing: only Jonathan and David knew the matter.

The narrator's observation - 'the lad knew not any thing' - emphasizes the secrecy's success. Two friends shared knowledge that affected kingdoms while a boy simply retrieved arrows. The phrase 'only Jonathan and David knew the matter' highlights their intimate bond; in a world of intrigue and danger, they alone understood. Such shared secrets deepen friendship. The boy's innocence protected him; what he did not know could not be extracted. Sometimes protecting others means keeping them ignorant of burdens they cannot bear.

Historical Context

Protecting servants from dangerous knowledge was both kind and prudent. Tortured servants could not reveal what they did not know. The exclusive knowledge between Jonathan and David intensified their covenantal bond.
