

1 Samuel 21:12

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And David laid up these words in his heart, and was sore afraid of Achish the king of Gath.

Analysis

And David laid up these words in his heart, and was sore afraid of Achish the king of Gath.

The Hebrew phrase 'vayasem et-haddevarim' (laid up these words) indicates David carefully considered the implications of what he heard. His fear intensified —'vayira me'od' (was exceedingly afraid). This internal response contrasts sharply with the David who faced Goliath without trembling. The difference reveals that circumstances, exhaustion, and isolation can erode even courageous faith. David's fear was rational—he had entered enemy territory carrying their champion's weapon. Yet his response would demonstrate that faith can coexist with fear, and that God's servants sometimes find deliverance through unconventional means. Psalm 56 records his prayer during this terrifying time.

Historical Context

David's decision to flee to Gath may have assumed that enemies of his enemy (Saul) might become allies. This calculation failed because his reputation preceded him. Ancient Near Eastern kings frequently executed enemy champions to prevent future threats.
