

1 Samuel 23:15

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And David saw that Saul was come out to seek his life: and David was in the wilderness of Ziph in a wood.

Analysis

And David saw that Saul was come out to seek his life: and David was in the wilderness of Ziph in a wood.

David's awareness of danger remained acute. The Hebrew 'vayar' (saw/perceived) indicates clear understanding of his situation—Saul sought 'his life' (naphsho), not merely his capture. The specific location 'in a wood' (Hebrew 'bachoresh') describes forested area within the wilderness, providing concealment. David's situation combined multiple dangers: the hostile wilderness, Saul's pursuit, and the psychological burden of continuous flight. Yet even in the wood, David was not alone—God's protection continued, and Jonathan's visit (v. 16) would soon encourage him. This verse sets the scene for one of Scripture's most tender friendship moments.

Historical Context

Forested areas in the wilderness of Ziph were rare but existed in certain locations. The 'wood' (choresh) provided concealment but also limited escape routes. David's knowledge of local terrain proved essential for survival during these years.
