

1 Samuel 24:20

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And now, behold, I know well that thou shalt surely be king, and that the kingdom of Israel shall be established in thine hand.

Analysis

And now, behold, I know well that thou shalt surely be king, and that the kingdom of Israel shall be established in thine hand.

Saul's declaration confirms what Jonathan earlier stated (23:17)—even David's persecutor knew his kingship was inevitable. The Hebrew emphatic construction 'yado'a yadati' (knowing I know/I know well) expresses certainty beyond doubt. The phrase 'shall be established' (Hebrew 'qum') indicates lasting dynasty, not merely David's personal reign. This public acknowledgment before Saul's army effectively conceded the succession dispute. Yet Saul's knowledge did not produce submission—he would resume pursuit despite this confession. His statement fulfilled Samuel's earlier prophecy while demonstrating that theological knowledge without heart transformation produces only more culpable rejection.

Historical Context

Saul's public acknowledgment of David's future kingship created significant political implications. His soldiers heard their king admit the succession would not follow normal dynastic patterns. This confession became part of the public record validating David's later reign.
