

1 Samuel 25:27

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And now this blessing which thine handmaid hath brought unto my lord, let it even be given unto the young men that follow my lord.

Analysis

And now this blessing which thine handmaid hath brought unto my lord, let it even be given unto the young men that follow my lord.

Abigail presents her provisions as 'blessing' (Hebrew 'berakah'), transforming material gifts into spiritual category. The Hebrew term connotes more than mere present—it carries connotations of favor and goodwill. Her request that it be given to 'the young men' rather than David personally demonstrates understanding of his situation: a leader must provision his followers. The phrase 'that follow my lord' (Hebrew 'haholekim beraglei adoni'—literally 'walking at my lord's feet') acknowledges David's legitimate leadership. Her gift addressed the practical need that motivated David's original request while reframing the transaction from demand to blessing.

Historical Context

Presenting gifts as 'blessing' was customary in ancient Near Eastern diplomacy, elevating material exchange to relational gesture. Abigail's direction of provisions to David's men showed practical wisdom about his immediate needs.
