

1 Samuel 30:10

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But David pursued, he and four hundred men: for two hundred abode behind, which were so faint that they could not go over the brook Besor.

Analysis

The division of forces, four hundred pursuing while two hundred remain, raises questions David will address later. The Hebrew 'piggeru' (too faint, exhausted) describes men beyond physical capacity to continue. The three-day return march from Aphek plus emotional devastation had depleted these men completely. David neither condemns their weakness nor delays the pursuit; he assigns them guard duty and proceeds. Leadership requires accepting varied capacity while maintaining mission focus.

Historical Context

Ancient military expeditions regularly left portions of forces to guard supplies and establish fallback positions. The two hundred men at Besor served a legitimate military function despite their exhaustion.
