

1 Samuel 6:19

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And he smote the men of Beth-shemesh, because they had looked into the ark of the LORD, even he smote of the people fifty thousand and threescore and ten men: and the people lamented, because the LORD had smitten many of the people with a great slaughter.

Analysis

And he smote the men of Beth-shemesh, because they had looked into the ark of the LORD, even he smote of the people fifty thousand and threescore and ten men: and the people lamented, because the LORD had smitten many of the people with a great slaughter.

The narrative takes a devastating turn. The Hebrew 'ra'ah' (to look, gaze) combined with the preposition 'be' (into) suggests more than casual glancing - this was intrusive inspection, perhaps opening the Ark to view its contents. Such presumption violated explicit commands (Numbers 4:20) that even Levites must not look upon holy objects. The number 'fifty thousand and seventy' has puzzled interpreters - Beth-shemesh likely could not have supported such a population. Some Hebrew manuscripts read 'seventy men, fifty of a thousand' (seventy leading men), while others suggest textual corruption. Regardless of the exact count, the 'great slaughter' (makkah gedolah) demonstrated that proximity to holiness without proper reverence brings death, not blessing. The same Ark that defeated Dagon now strikes Israelites who treat it casually.

Historical Context

Beth-shemesh was a modest town; population estimates for Israelite villages rarely exceed a few thousand. The textual difficulty with the number has generated various solutions: scribal error, idiomatic expression, or cumulative plague deaths over time. The Septuagint omits 'fifty thousand,' reading simply 'seventy men.'
