

1 Samuel 8:18

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And ye shall cry out in that day because of your king which ye shall have chosen you; and the LORD will not hear you in that day.

Analysis

And ye shall cry out in that day because of your king which ye shall have chosen you; and the LORD will not hear you in that day.

This prophetic warning employs the same vocabulary as Israel's Egyptian bondage. The verb "za'aq" (cry out) appears in Exodus 2:23 when Israel groaned under Pharaoh's oppression and their cry came up to God. But here comes the chilling difference: "the LORD will not hear you" (Hebrew "lo ya'aneh"). God will not intervene because they have deliberately chosen this condition. The phrase "which ye shall have chosen you" emphasizes human responsibility—twice using forms of "bachar" (to choose) to underscore that this outcome was self-selected. God's non-response does not reflect inability or indifference but judicial consequence. Having rejected divine rule for human kingship, they cannot then appeal to divine deliverance from human tyranny. This represents not abandonment but the painful respect God shows for human choices and their consequences. Yet even this severe warning reveals grace: God tells them beforehand so they cannot claim ignorance.

Historical Context

The cry for deliverance (za'aq/tsa'aq) was technical covenant vocabulary for appealing to a suzerain for help. God's non-response represents a temporary suspension of covenant intervention, though the broader narrative shows His continued involvement in Israel's history even through the monarchy.
