

1 Samuel 9:15

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Now the LORD had told Samuel in his ear a day before Saul came, saying,

Analysis

Now the LORD had told Samuel in his ear a day before Saul came, saying,

The narrative now pulls back the curtain to reveal divine activity behind the human drama. The Hebrew phrase galah et-ozen ('uncovered his ear' or 'revealed to his ear') denotes intimate, confidential communication, suggesting God speaking directly into Samuel's consciousness. The timing, 'a day before,' demonstrates that nothing in this story is accidental. Before Saul lost his donkeys, before he began his search, before he considered returning home, God had already prepared Samuel for this encounter. This verse encapsulates the Reformed understanding of divine sovereignty: human choices are real and meaningful, yet they unfold within God's eternal decree. Samuel's prophetic office gave him access to divine foreknowledge that enabled him to recognize and respond to Saul appropriately. The verse functions as theological commentary on the entire narrative, assuring readers that God remains actively involved in Israel's political transition.

Historical Context

The idiom of 'uncovering the ear' appears elsewhere in Scripture (2 Samuel 7:27; Job 33:16; 36:10) and denotes revelation of secrets or divine instruction. Samuel's preparation a full day in advance indicates the deliberate nature of divine planning. The prophetic office involved receiving such advance revelations to guide Israel through critical transitions.
