

1 Samuel 9:25

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And when they were come down from the high place into the city, Samuel communed with Saul upon the top of the house.

Analysis

And when they were come down from the high place into the city, Samuel communed with Saul upon the top of the house.

After the public feast, Samuel seeks private conversation with Saul on the rooftop, a typical setting for confidential discourse in ancient Israel. The Hebrew vayedabber ('communed' or 'spoke') suggests extended, meaningful conversation rather than brief exchange. The move from 'high place' to 'top of the house' maintains elevation imagery while shifting from public sacred space to private domestic space. This rooftop conversation likely included instruction about kingship, warning about its responsibilities, and preparation for the morning's anointing. Samuel, who had himself been reluctant about the monarchy, now faithfully prepares God's chosen king. The intimacy of this setting, under the stars of a Judean night, creates a sacred moment of mentorship as the aging prophet shares divine wisdom with the young man about to assume unprecedented responsibility.

Historical Context

Flat rooftops in ancient Israelite homes served multiple purposes: drying goods, sleeping in summer heat, and private conversation away from household activity. Important conversations often occurred on rooftops (cf. Joshua 2:6; Acts 10:9). The 'coming down' from the high place reflects the typical geography of sanctuary sites on elevated ground with towns below.

1. What role does private instruction and mentorship play in preparing for public leadership?
2. How might Samuel's personal struggles with Israel's request for a king have informed his counsel to Saul?
