

1 Samuel 9:5

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And when they were come to the land of Zuph, Saul said to his servant that was with him, Come, and let us return; lest my father leave caring for the asses, and take thought for us.

Analysis

And when they were come to the land of Zuph, Saul said to his servant that was with him, Come, and let us return; lest my father leave caring for the asses, and take thought for us.

Saul's words reveal a son's concern for his father's anxiety, showing filial piety that was highly valued in Israelite culture. The land of Zuph holds special significance as the ancestral territory of Samuel's family (1:1). Thus Saul's decision to abandon the search brings him precisely to where God intended. His reasoning demonstrates practical wisdom: prolonged absence would cause his father to worry more about his son than the lost animals. The Hebrew da'ag ('take thought' or 'be anxious') suggests genuine emotional concern. Ironically, Saul's consideration for his father's peace of mind leads him to the very place where his family's future would be forever changed. This intersection of human decision and divine sovereignty illustrates how God weaves our choices into His predetermined plan without violating our moral agency.

Historical Context

The land of Zuph was associated with Samuel's Levitical ancestry through Zuph/Zophai (1 Chronicles 6:26, 35). This region in the hill country of Ephraim contained Ramah, Samuel's home and prophetic base. The servant's subsequent knowledge of a 'man of God' in this city suggests Samuel's reputation had spread throughout the region.
