

1 Timothy 5:2

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

The elder women as mothers; the younger as sisters, with all purity.

Analysis

The elder women as mothers; the younger as sisters, with all purity (πρεσβυτέρας ὡς μητέρας, νεωτέρας ὡς ἀδελφὰς ἐν πάσῃ ἀγνείᾳ, presbyteras hōs mēteras, neōteras hōs adelphas en pasē hagneia)—Timothy must treat older women as mothers, younger women as sisters, 'in all purity.' Hagneia means purity, chastity, holiness—especially moral and sexual purity.

This continues Paul's instruction on relating to different age groups (5:1: older men as fathers, younger men as brothers). The emphasis on all purity when relating to younger women addresses potential sexual temptation—Timothy must guard against any impropriety or appearance of evil. Treat them with the respect and boundaries appropriate for siblings.

The family metaphor redefines church relationships. We're not a professional organization or social club but God's household—with all the honor, love, and appropriate boundaries family relationships require. Sexual purity in ministry relationships protects both the minister and the congregation.

Historical Context

In the Greco-Roman world, interactions between unrelated men and women were strictly regulated to protect reputations. The church's counter-cultural inclusion of women in fellowship could be misunderstood or lead to scandal. Paul insists

Timothy relate to women with familial respect and scrupulous purity—treating older women with maternal honor and younger women with sisterly propriety.

Study Questions

1. How does viewing church members as family change our relationships and interactions?
2. Why does Paul specifically emphasize purity in relating to younger women?
3. What practical safeguards protect ministers from inappropriate relationships with opposite-sex church members?
