

1 Timothy 5:3

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Honour widows that are widows indeed.

Analysis

Honour widows that are widows indeed (Χήρας τίμα τὰς ὄντως χήρας, Chēras tima tas ontōs chēras)—'honor widows who are truly widows.' Timaō means to honor, value, care for—including financial support (5:17-18 uses the same word for paying elders). Ontōs means 'really, truly, actually'—genuine widows.

Paul will define 'widows indeed' in verses 5, 9-10: women without family support who trust in God and live godly lives. The church has responsibility to care for vulnerable widows, but not all who have lost husbands qualify—some have family who should support them (5:4, 8, 16).

This begins Paul's extended discussion of widow care (5:3-16), addressing a major practical issue in the early church. With no social safety net, widows were among society's most vulnerable. The church's care for 'widows indeed' demonstrated the gospel's power to create a radically compassionate community.

Historical Context

In the ancient world, widows without sons faced destitution—unable to inherit property or work most jobs. The early church established an order of widows for official support (Acts 6:1-6, 9:39-41). But limited resources required careful stewardship. Paul gives criteria to distinguish widows who genuinely need church support from those with other means.

Study Questions

1. What does it mean to 'honor' widows—how does financial support express honor?
2. How can churches discern who genuinely needs assistance versus who has other support?
3. What modern vulnerable populations require the church's care as 'widows' did in Paul's time?
