

1 Timothy 5:7

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And these things give in charge, that they may be blameless.

Analysis

And these things give in charge, that they may be blameless (καὶ ταῦτα παράγγελλε, ἵνα ἀνεπίλημπτοι ὁσιν, kai tauta parangelle, hina anepilēmptoi ὁσιν) —'command these things, so that they may be above reproach.' Parangellō is military language: order, charge, command. Anepilēmptos means blameless, irreproachable—the same term used for elders (3:2).

Paul instructs Timothy to publicly teach these principles about widow care and family responsibility. The goal is that both widows and their families will be 'above reproach'—their conduct won't bring criticism on the church. Families caring for their own demonstrate godliness; widows living devotedly demonstrate faith; the church's discernment demonstrates wisdom.

Public teaching on practical matters like financial stewardship and family responsibility is essential pastoral ministry. These aren't private suggestions but apostolic commands to be proclaimed authoritatively. The church's reputation depends on members living blamelessly.

Historical Context

The early church faced scrutiny from pagan society looking for reasons to criticize. If Christians neglected their own families while claiming superior virtue, or if the church distributed funds carelessly, enemies would accuse believers of hypocrisy. Paul insists on blameless conduct—both in private family care and public church benevolence—to protect the gospel's credibility.
