

2 Chronicles 30:9

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For if ye turn again unto the LORD, your brethren and your children shall find compassion before them that lead them captive, so that they shall come again into this land: for the LORD your God is gracious and merciful, and will not turn away his face from you, if ye return unto him.

Analysis

Hezekiah's invitation to separated Israel includes powerful theology: 'For if ye turn again unto the LORD, your brethren and your children shall find compassion before them that lead them captive, so that they shall come again into this land: for the LORD your God is gracious and merciful, and will not turn away his face from you, if ye return unto him.' The promise that repentance (shuv - return/turn) brings restoration demonstrates covenant grace. Even those already exiled can experience mercy through repentance. The divine character - gracious (channun) and merciful (rachum) - guarantees this promise. The condition 'if ye return' requires human response, but God's gracious nature makes return possible and restoration certain.

Historical Context

Hezekiah invited Northern Kingdom remnant (after Assyrian captivity of 722 BCE) to join Judah's Passover celebration (c. 715 BCE). This grace-filled invitation to apostate Israel demonstrated that repentance can restore even those under judgment.
