

2 Chronicles 32:8

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

With him is an arm of flesh; but with us is the LORD our God to help us, and to fight our battles. And the people rested themselves upon the words of Hezekiah king of Judah.

Analysis

Hezekiah's exhortation to Judah explains why they need not fear Assyria: 'With him is an arm of flesh; but with us is the LORD our God to help us, and to fight our battles. And the people rested themselves upon the words of Ahaz king of Judah.' The contrast - 'arm of flesh' (zero'a basar) versus 'LORD our God' - distinguishes between mere human power and divine omnipotence. Sennacherib had only creaturely strength, while Judah had the Creator who 'helps' and 'fights battles.' The people's response - 'rested themselves' (samakh - lean/rely) on Hezekiah's words - demonstrated faith. This teaches that spiritual leaders must direct people's trust to God, not human resources. Christ incarnates this truth - fully human ('arm of flesh') yet fully God, fighting and winning our battles.

Historical Context

Sennacherib's invasion (701 BCE) brought Assyria's vast military machine against Jerusalem. Hezekiah's faith-building words prepared people for the miraculous deliverance when God's angel destroyed 185,000 Assyrians (32:21), vindicating trust in God over human calculation.

Study Questions

1. What 'arms of flesh' - human solutions, political powers, personal abilities - are you tempted to trust instead of God?
2. How can you cultivate the ability to 'rest yourself' on God's promises when circumstances seem overwhelming?
