

2 Corinthians 10:3

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For though we walk in the flesh, we do not war after the flesh:

Analysis

For though we walk in the flesh, we do not war after the flesh (ἐν σαρκὶ γὰρ περιπατοῦντες οὐ κατὰ σάρκα στρατευόμεθα)—Paul distinguishes between inevitable human embodiment (en sarki, "in flesh") and sinful methods (kata sarka, "according to flesh"). Strateuometha (στρατευόμεθα, "we wage war") introduces the military metaphor that dominates verses 3-6. Christian ministry is not merely religious activity but spiritual warfare—a cosmic conflict requiring divine weapons.

This verse establishes the foundational antithesis: apostles operate in the physical realm but employ spiritual weapons. The opponents' error was inverting this—using fleshly weapons (eloquence, credentials, manipulation) in spiritual conflict. Paul's ministry model reflects the incarnation: fully human (en sarki) yet divinely empowered (kata pneuma).

Historical Context

Military imagery was ubiquitous in the Roman Empire. Corinthian Christians would have seen soldiers daily, understood siege warfare, and recognized the language of conquest. Paul appropriates this imagery to describe gospel ministry—not physical violence but spiritual conquest of rebellious thoughts and false ideologies that oppose God's truth.

Study Questions

1. What areas of ministry are you fighting with fleshly weapons (human wisdom, manipulation, guilt) rather than spiritual power (prayer, truth, Spirit's conviction)?
2. How does recognizing spiritual warfare change your response to opposition—from self-defense to prayer-dependent reliance on God?
3. What does it practically mean to 'walk in the flesh' (live as a human) while refusing to 'war according to the flesh' (use worldly methods)?
