

2 Corinthians 4:17

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory;

Analysis

For our light affliction, which is but for a moment (to gar parautika elaphron tēs thlipseōs hēmōn, tō γὰρ παραυτίκα ἐλαφρὸν τῆς θλίψεως ἡμῶν)—after cataloging imprisonments, beatings, shipwrecks, and stonings (11:23-28), Paul calls it elaphron (ἐλαφρόν, 'light, easy, insignificant')! Parautika (παραυτίκα, 'momentary, transient') describes 70+ years of hardship. Only from eternity's perspective is a lifetime 'momentary'; only compared to glory is catastrophe 'light.'

Worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory (kath' hyperbolēn eis hyperbolēn aiōnion baros doxēs katergazetai hēmin, καθ' ὑπερβολὴν εἰς ὑπερβολὴν αἰώνιον βάρος δόξης κατεργάζεται ἡμῖν)—kath' hyperbolēn eis hyperbolēn (καθ' ὑπερβολὴν εἰς ὑπερβολὴν, 'beyond all measure, to an extraordinary degree, surpassing excellence') is superlative heaped on superlative. Baros (βάρος, 'weight, burden') contrasts with 'light'—affliction is featherweight, glory is massive. Katergazomai (κατεργάζομαι, 'to work out, produce, accomplish') shows suffering actively producing glory, not just preceding it. Affliction isn't merely endured; it's the divinely appointed means of glory's production.

Historical Context

Jewish apocalyptic literature spoke of 'the weight of glory' awaiting the righteous after suffering (4 Ezra, 2 Barabbas). Paul intensifies this: glory's weight infinitely exceeds suffering's lightness, glory's eternity dwarfs suffering's momentariness, and suffering itself produces glory. This theodicy makes sense only from resurrection perspective, which Paul thoroughly embraced.

Study Questions

1. What helps you genuinely regard your present sufferings as 'light and momentary' without minimizing their real pain?
2. How does Paul's 'working for us' language challenge the view that suffering is purposeless or meaningless?
3. In what ways have past afflictions 'worked' an eternal weight of glory in your character or faith that you can now recognize?
