

2 Corinthians 5:7

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

(For we walk by faith, not by sight:)

Analysis

For we walk by faith, not by sight—Paul provides theological grounding for verse 6's tension. Dia pisteōs peripatoumen (διὰ πίστεως περιπατοῦμεν, "through faith we walk") versus dia eidous (διὰ εἰδούς, "through sight/appearance"). Eidos (εἶδος) means visible form, outward appearance—what can be empirically verified. Pistis (πίστις, "faith") is confident trust in God's unseen promises, particularly resurrection hope.

This parenthetical statement explains why absence from the Lord doesn't diminish confidence. Faith bridges the gap between present reality and promised glory. The verb peripateō (περιπατέω, "walk") indicates ongoing lifestyle, not isolated acts—our entire life orientation is faith-governed, not appearance-governed. This counters both demand for empirical proof and despair over present suffering. Faith perceives eternal realities invisible to natural sight (Hebrews 11:1), making it superior, not inferior, to physical vision.

Historical Context

First-century culture highly valued visible honor, status, and power. Paul's opponents in Corinth boasted in appearance (v. 12)—eloquence, impressive presence, worldly credentials. Paul stakes apostolic authority on invisible realities: resurrection hope, internal transformation, God's coming vindication. This was profoundly counter-cultural and required constant reinforcement.

Study Questions

1. What specific "visible" realities tempt you to doubt invisible spiritual promises—how do you combat this with faith?
2. How is walking by faith different from blind optimism or wishful thinking—what makes Christian faith reasonable?
3. In what areas of life are you tempted to demand visible proof rather than trust God's word—finances, relationships, ministry?
