

2 Corinthians 6:3

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Giving no offence in any thing, that the ministry be not blamed:

Analysis

Giving no offence in any thing (μηδεμίαν ἐν μηδενὶ διδόντες προσκοπήν, mēdemian en mēdeni didontes proskopēn, 'placing no stumbling block in anything')—The present participle didontes indicates Paul's habitual practice. Proskopē means an obstacle or occasion for stumbling, something that would cause another to trip or fall into sin. The doubled negative (mēdemian en mēdeni) creates comprehensive scope: 'no offense in nothing.'

That the ministry be not blamed (ἵνα μὴ μωμηθῇ ἡ διακονία, hina mē mōmēthē hē diakonia)—The subjunctive mood with hina expresses purpose: Paul's blameless conduct aims to protect the gospel ministry from reproach. Mōmaomai means to find fault, criticize, or discredit. Paul recognizes that ministerial failure brings public disgrace not merely on the minister but on the gospel itself.

This verse introduces the famous 'hardship catalogue' (vv.4-10) by establishing its purpose: Paul's conduct must adorn the gospel, not discredit it. True apostolic ministry combines doctrinal fidelity with ethical integrity—orthodoxy without orthopraxy breeds hypocrisy and undermines evangelistic credibility.

Historical Context

Paul faced constant criticism from opponents in Corinth who questioned his apostolic credentials and conduct. His opponents likely pointed to his sufferings as evidence of divine disfavor. Paul turns this argument on its head in verses 4-10, showing that apostolic hardships, borne with godly character, actually validate rather than discredit true ministry.
