

2 Corinthians 8:11

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Now therefore perform the doing of it; that as there was a readiness to will, so there may be a performance also out of that which ye have.

Analysis

Now therefore perform the doing of it; that as there was a readiness to will, so there may be a performance also out of that which ye have—The verb epiteleō (ἐπιτελέω, 'complete/finish/accomplish') appears in imperative form: epistelēsate kai to poiēsai ('complete also the doing'). Paul wants action matching intention. The phrase hē prothumia tou thelein (ἡ προθυμία τοῦ θέλειν, 'the readiness of willing') refers to their year-old commitment; now must come to epitalesai ('the completing') ek tou echein (ἐκ τοῦ ἔχειν, 'out of what you have').

This last phrase is crucial: Paul expects giving proportionate to resources, not beyond them (contrast Macedonians in v. 3 who gave para dynamin). He doesn't demand Macedonian-level sacrifice from Corinth, only faithfulness to their own capacity. The emphasis on epitalesai (completion/finishing) recurs throughout chapters 8-9—Paul wants follow-through. Good intentions without action mock both recipients and God. The balance between generous willingness and practical completion reflects mature stewardship: enthusiasm grounded in reality, vision matched by execution.

Historical Context

Paul's insistence on completing commitments addressed a cultural issue: wealthy Corinthians might have made public pledges for honor but failed to follow through when the spotlight faded. This pattern was common in Greco-Roman civic life where promises exceeded performance. Paul holds them to their word, teaching that Christian integrity means private faithfulness, not just public posturing.
