

2 Corinthians 8:5

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And this they did, not as we hoped, but first gave their own selves to the Lord, and unto us by the will of God.

Analysis

And this they did, not as we hoped, but first gave their own selves to the Lord, and unto us by the will of God—Paul expected financial contribution; the Macedonians gave something more foundational: heautous edōkan prōton tō kyriō ('themselves they gave first to the Lord'). The adverb prōton (πρῶτον, 'first') indicates priority: self-consecration precedes fiscal contribution. Only those who have offered themselves as living sacrifices (Romans 12:1) can give money without idolatry.

The phrase dia thelēmatos theou (διὰ θελήματος θεοῦ, 'through the will of God') attributes even their submission to Paul's apostolic ministry to divine initiative. This verse establishes crucial sequence:

1. surrender to Christ
2. submission to godly leadership
3. sacrificial financial giving.

Attempts to give money while withholding the self produce either legalism or manipulation. The Macedonians avoided this trap by recognizing that all Christian action flows from prior divine grace and self-giving.

Historical Context

Paul's surprise ('not as we hoped') suggests he initially sought only financial contributions. The Macedonian churches' total consecration—lives, loyalty, and livelihood—exceeded his expectations and modeled the holistic devotion Paul preached. This contrasts sharply with the Corinthian church's tendency toward factionalism, where members gave loyalty to human leaders (1 Corinthians 1:10-13) rather than first to Christ, then to Christ's appointed servants.
