

2 Corinthians 9:4

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Lest haply if they of Macedonia come with me, and find you unprepared, we (that we say not, ye) should be ashamed in this same confident boasting.

Analysis

Lest haply if they of Macedonia come with me—Paul plans to travel with Macedonian delegates who will witness Corinth's response. And find you unprepared (εὕρωμεν ὑμᾶς ἀπαρασκευάστους) uses the negated form of the readiness word from v. 2-3: from paraskeuazō (prepared) to aparaskeuastos (unprepared). The irony is stark: those Paul praised for readiness might be found unready.

We (that we say not, ye) should be ashamed (καταισχυνθῶμεν ἡμεῖς, ἵνα μὴ λέγωμεν ὑμεῖς) reveals Paul's pastoral delicacy. The verb kataischynō (καταισχύνω) means "put to shame, disgrace, humiliate." Paul says he ("we") would be embarrassed—having boasted of them—but the parenthetical "that we say not, ye" hints that Corinthians themselves would bear the greater shame. This tactful construction spares their feelings while making the point.

In this same confident boasting (ἐν τῇ ὑποστάσει ταύτῃ τῆς καυχήσεως)—hypostasis (ὑπόστασις) means "confidence, assurance, substantial reality." Paul's boasting wasn't empty rhetoric but confident assertion based on their commitment. Failure to perform would make that confidence groundless.

Historical Context

Honor-shame dynamics dominated Greco-Roman culture far more than modern Western guilt-innocence cultures. Public disgrace could destroy social standing, business relationships, and community influence. Paul's gentle threat of "shame" before Macedonian witnesses would powerfully motivate action. Yet he redeems this cultural value: shame is reoriented from peer approval to covenant faithfulness and Christ's honor (10:17-18).

Study Questions

1. How does the presence of witnesses affect your faithfulness to commitments—and should it?
2. When has fear of disappointing others (whether healthy or unhealthy) motivated your obedience?
3. How do you balance appropriate concern for reputation with freedom from people-pleasing?
