

2 Corinthians 9:8

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work:

Analysis

And God is able (δυνατεῖ δὲ ὁ θεός)—The verb dynateō (δυνατέω, "is powerful, able") assures anxious givers that generosity never outstrips God's provision. This addresses the fear beneath stinginess: "If I give, will I have enough?" To make all grace abound toward you (πᾶσαν χάριν περισσεῦσαι εἰς ὑμᾶς) uses perisseuō (περισσεύω, "overflow, exceed, abound") with all grace (πᾶσαν χάριν)—comprehensive, abundant supply. Grace isn't merely spiritual; it includes material provision for generous living.

That ye, always having all sufficiency in all things (ἴνα ἐν παντὶ πάντοτε πᾶσαν αὐτάρκειαν ἔχοντες)—the threefold "all" (πᾶς) emphasizes totality: every circumstance, every time, every kind of sufficiency. Autarkeia (αὐτάρκεια, "self-sufficiency, contentment") was a Stoic virtue—independence from external circumstances. Paul baptizes this concept: Christian contentment comes not from self-sufficiency but God-sufficiency (Phil 4:11-13, 19).

May abound to every good work (περισσεύητε εἰς πᾶν ἔργον ἀγαθόν)—the verb perisseuō appears again. God's provision creates a cycle: He gives abundantly, we have sufficiency, therefore we can give abundantly, bringing glory to Him. The purpose of God's grace isn't hoarding but overflow into good works. Generosity begets generosity.

Historical Context

In subsistence economies, scarcity mentality dominated. Most people lived one failed harvest from starvation. The idea that giving wouldn't create destitution but rather abundance seemed fantastical. Paul promises supernatural provision—a radical claim requiring faith in God's covenant faithfulness. The early church's dramatic generosity (Acts 2:44-45; 4:32-37) demonstrated this principle's reality, creating a countercultural economic community.

Study Questions

1. How have you experienced God's provision enabling continued or increased generosity?
2. What fears about future scarcity currently hinder present generosity—and how does this verse address those fears?
3. How does viewing your resources as God-given 'sufficiency for every good work' rather than private property affect your financial decisions?
