

2 Peter 3:18

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. To him be glory both now and for ever. Amen.

Analysis

But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. To him be glory both now and for ever. Amen. Peter concludes with a call to "grow in grace" (auxanete de en chariti, αὐξάνετε δὲ ἐν χάριτι)—progressive increase in experiencing and expressing God's unmerited favor. This isn't static possession but dynamic development. "And in the knowledge" (kai gnōsei, καὶ γνώσει) returns to the epistle's theme (1:2-3, 5-6, 8)—deep, experiential, relational knowledge of Christ, not mere intellectual information.

The object is "our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ" (tou kyriou hēmōn kai sōtēros Iēsou Christou). Growth occurs specifically through knowing Him more deeply—His character, work, will, and presence. This person-centered focus distinguishes biblical Christianity from abstract philosophy or impersonal religion. Knowing Christ personally, intimately, transformatively is both the means and goal of spiritual growth.

The doxology "To him be glory both now and for ever" (autō hē doxa kai nyn kai eis hēmeran aiōnos) ascribes eternal glory to Christ. "Both now and for ever" emphasizes Christ's worthiness of glory temporally (in this age) and eternally (in the age to come). "Amen" (amēn, ἀμήν) confirms truth and expresses agreement. This Christocentric conclusion anchors all Peter's warnings and exhortations in the ultimate reality: Jesus Christ's eternal lordship and glory.

Historical Context

The closing doxology follows standard first-century letter conventions but with distinctly Christian content—ascribing glory to Christ, not just God the Father, affirming His deity. Such doxologies appear throughout New Testament epistles (Rom 16:25-27; Eph 3:20-21; Phil 4:20; 1 Tim 1:17; 6:16; 2 Tim 4:18; Heb 13:21; 1 Pet 4:11; 5:11; Jude 24-25; Rev 1:5-6), often concluding with "Amen."

The exhortation to "grow in grace and knowledge" summarizes the epistle's pastoral concern: believers must progress in Christlikeness (grace) through deepening relationship with Christ (knowledge). Against false teachers promoting corrupt doctrine and immoral living, Peter calls readers back to foundational Christian growth—increasing in grace (sanctification) by increasing in knowing Christ (relationship). This growth provides assurance (1:10), fruitfulness (1:8), and stability against error (3:17).
