

2 Thessalonians 1:3

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

We are bound to thank God always for you, brethren, as it is meet, because that your faith groweth exceedingly, and the charity of every one of you all toward each other aboundeth;

Analysis

We are bound to thank God always for you, brethren, as it is meet, because that your faith groweth exceedingly, and the charity of every one of you all toward each other aboundeth—Paul's thanksgiving is obligatory (opheilomen, ὀφείλομεν, 'we owe'). Their pistis (πίστις, faith) is growing exceedingly (hyperauxanei, ὑπεραυξάνει), a rare compound meaning 'super-growing,' used only here in the NT.

Their agapē (ἀγάπη, self-sacrificing love) abounds (pleonazei, πλεονάζει)—overflows beyond measure. Despite persecution, the Thessalonians' faith didn't merely survive but thrived. Each believer loved every one, not selectively. This commendation precedes Paul's stern correction in chapter 2, following the biblical pattern of affirmation before rebuke.

Historical Context

The Thessalonian church was young (perhaps only 1-2 years old) and faced relentless opposition. Paul's earlier ministry there lasted mere weeks (Acts 17:2). Yet their explosive growth in faith and love testified to the Spirit's power, not human wisdom or favorable circumstances.

Study Questions

1. Is your faith 'super-growing' under pressure, or merely surviving?
2. How specifically do you demonstrate love to 'every one' in your church, including the difficult?
3. Why does Paul consider thanksgiving for believers' growth not optional but obligatory?
