

2 Thessalonians 2:15

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Therefore, brethren, stand fast, and hold the traditions which ye have been taught, whether by word, or our epistle.

Analysis

Therefore, brethren, stand fast, and hold the traditions which ye have been taught, whether by word, or our epistle—Therefore draws application from election and calling. Two commands: stand fast (stēkete, στήκετε, maintain position, don't retreat) and hold the traditions (krateite tas paradoseis, κρατεῖτε τὰς παραδόσεις, grip firmly the teachings handed down).

Paradosis (παράδοσις, tradition) means authoritative teaching transmitted from apostles, both oral (by word) and written (our epistle). This isn't human tradition but apostolic deposit. Stability amid eschatological deception requires anchoring in revealed truth, not novelty. The elect persevere by clutching apostolic doctrine.

Historical Context

Before the New Testament canon was complete, oral apostolic tradition carried equal authority with written letters. Paul validates both forms of revelation. Later, written Scripture became the sole infallible authority, testing all tradition. But the principle remains: stand on apostolic truth, not contemporary speculation.

Study Questions

1. What 'traditions' (core doctrines) have you been tempted to abandon under cultural pressure?
2. How do you distinguish authoritative apostolic tradition from mere human customs?
3. Why does standing firm in truth require active effort ('hold fast') rather than passive agreement?
