

2 Thessalonians 3:17

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

The salutation of Paul with mine own hand, which is the token in every epistle: so I write.

Analysis

The salutation of Paul with mine own hand, which is the token in every epistle: so I write—The salutation of Paul with mine own hand (ho aspasmos tē emē cheiri Paulou, ὁ ἀσπασμὸς τῇ ἐμῇ χειρὶ Παύλου)—Paul personally pens the closing greeting. Typically, he dictated to a scribe (Rom. 16:22) but added personal signature. Which is the token in every epistle (sēmeion en pasē epistolē, σημεῖον ἐν πάσῃ ἐπιστολῇ)—authenticating mark against forgery (cf. 2:2).

So I write (houtōs graphō, οὕτως γράφω)—Paul's distinctive handwriting (perhaps large letters, Gal. 6:11) verified genuineness. This protected against false letters claiming apostolic authority. Truth requires authentication; claims need verification. Apostolic succession required written, verifiable transmission.

Historical Context

Without modern authentication methods, personal handwriting signatures were primary verification. Paul's emphasis shows early forgery attempts. The church needed safeguards to distinguish apostolic teaching from counterfeits. This principle undergirds later canon formation—apostolic authorship authenticated Scripture.
