

Acts 1:4

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And, being assembled together with them, commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith he, ye have heard of me.

Analysis

Jesus' command to wait for the Spirit reveals the essential relationship between promise and power in Christian ministry. The Greek 'perimenein' (wait for) suggests active expectation rather than passive delay. This establishes that effective witness requires divine empowerment beyond human ability, a theme central to Acts' narrative of Spirit-empowered mission.

Historical Context

Spoken during the 40 days between resurrection and ascension (circa AD 30), this command kept the disciples in Jerusalem despite persecution risks. The 'promise of the Father' refers to Joel's prophecy and Jesus' earlier teachings about the Comforter.
