

Acts 10:28

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And he said unto them, Ye know how that it is an unlawful thing for a man that is a Jew to keep company, or come unto one of another nation; but God hath shewed me that I should not call any man common or unclean.

Analysis

Peter explained: 'Ye know how that it is an unlawful thing for a man that is a Jew to keep company, or come unto one of another nation; but God hath shewed me that I should not call any man common or unclean.' The vision's meaning became clear - it concerned people, not merely food. God was abolishing ceremonial distinctions between Jews and Gentiles under the new covenant. Reformed theology sees this as the transition from old covenant particularity (Israel) to new covenant universality (all nations). The gospel breaks down all human barriers and divisions.

Historical Context

Jewish oral tradition (later codified in the Talmud) forbade Jews from entering Gentile homes or eating with Gentiles to maintain ceremonial purity. This tradition went beyond Mosaic law but was deeply ingrained. Peter's obedience to enter Cornelius's home marked a revolutionary change.

1. How does the gospel abolish ceremonial and ethnic distinctions between peoples?
2. What 'unlawful' cultural barriers might God be calling His church to cross today?
3. Why was the transition from Jewish particularity to universal gospel so difficult for the early church?
