

Acts 11:13

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And he shewed us how he had seen an angel in his house, which stood and said unto him, Send men to Joppa, and call for Simon, whose surname is Peter;

Analysis

And he shewed us how he had seen an angel in his house, which stood and said unto him, Send men to Joppa, and call for Simon, whose surname is Peter; Cornelius's testimony to angelic visitation provides independent corroboration, establishing that both parties received divine direction simultaneously.

Historical Context

Cornelius's account matched Peter's experience—both received supernatural revelation directing them toward meeting. Angel in his house parallels Peter's rooftop vision. This dual divine intervention around 40 CE demonstrated God's initiative from both sides—preparing Peter through vision while directing Cornelius through angel. Such extraordinary confirmation emphasized Gentile inclusion's theological significance.
