

Acts 12:24

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But the word of God grew and multiplied.

Analysis

The contrast between Herod's death and God's word growing emphasizes that human opposition cannot thwart divine purposes. The organic language ('grew and multiplied') suggests living, reproducing expansion through conversions and church planting. This summary statement shows that persecution strengthens rather than weakens the church.

Historical Context

Following Herod's death (AD 44), Jewish persecution of Christians temporarily lessened, allowing church expansion. This period saw the gospel spreading throughout the eastern Mediterranean, setting the stage for Paul's missionary journeys.
