

Acts 14:26

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And thence sailed to Antioch, from whence they had been recommended to the grace of God for the work which they fulfilled.

Analysis

Thence sailed to Antioch, from whence they had been recommended to the grace of God for the work which they fulfilled. The missionaries' return to their sending church demonstrates accountability and partnership in gospel work. The Greek paradothentes (παραδοθέντες, "recommended") means "handed over, committed," emphasizing the church's role in commissioning. They were commended to the grace of God (τῇ χάριτι τοῦ θεοῦ)—not to their own abilities but to divine enabling. Charis (grace) here means God's empowering favor for mission.

For the work which they fulfilled (εἰς τὸ ἔργον ὃ ἐπλήρωσαν)—the aorist verb plēroō (fulfilled, completed) indicates successful mission completion. They didn't abandon their assignment despite persecution, stoning, and opposition. This establishes the local church as the proper sending and receiving agency for missionaries, not independent operators. The phrase "from whence they had been" emphasizes returning to origins, closing the missional circle with testimony of God's faithfulness.

Historical Context

Syrian Antioch (Acts 11:19-26, 13:1-3) was the first predominantly Gentile church and launching point for systematic Gentile missions. Founded by persecution-scattered disciples, it became Christianity's second great center after Jerusalem.

The journey's completion (circa AD 48) preceded the Jerusalem Council (Acts 15), which would address theological tensions from Gentile conversions this trip generated.

Study Questions

1. How does the pattern of sending churches commissioning and receiving missionaries inform contemporary mission accountability?
2. What does being commended 'to the grace of God' teach about where true missionary power and protection originate?
